

..... This belief spurs their efforts to both find creative ways to raise money for organizations and provide space for hosting charitable events at their east side facility. The collision of community, creativity and charity are responsible for the birth of special events like "Punch Out" where local brewers face off in exhibition boxing matches to raise proceeds for their favorite causes such as extending the Loveland bike trail to downtown Cincinnati and further north. "We are very into active lifestyle," said Slattery. Fifty West is also active in their commitment to a culture of inclusion. This year's nomination came from Starfire Council of Greater Cincinnati, an organization with a mission to decrease the social isolation of people with developmental disabilities. Starfire wants to recognize Fifty West for the overall impact they have had in the community, their commitment to inclusive hiring, and the difference they have made in the life of their employee and friend, Michael. Voters, let's hope Fifty West keeps fighting the good fight!
